EXTENDED PROJECT QUALIFICATION

90%
A*-B Grades

For more information about the EPOQ, please contact the Admissions Team at admissions@cardinalnewman.ac.uk

The Extended Project Qualification or EPQ, is an additional qualification that can be studied alongside your BTEC or A Levels at Cardinal Newman, starting at the end of Year 12 and completed in Year 13. Worth 70 UCAS points (which is equivalent to half of an A Level), universities including Oxford and Cambridge encourage students to study the EPQ, as it is highly regarded and often features in a student's offer from university.

The EPQ provides you with the opportunity to choose the topic and type of project that you complete, meaning you can choose something that you are especially interested in or passionate about. You could choose to explore an aspect of a subject that you are studying further, choose something in which you have a personal interest or do a project about an issue that concerns you.

PASS RATE

It is especially useful for students who are aspiring to progress into a career in a highly competitive field such as Medicine or Law, as it showcases your abilities for independent study and research and you could choose a topic that is relevant to that area of study.

It shows admissions staff at universities that you are self-motivated, imaginative and committed to study and has helped students to gain places at the UK's most prestigious universities.

You will have the support and guidance of a member of College staff throughout the project, which gives you the opportunity to receive feedback along the way.

Our results for EPQ are outstanding, with 26% of EPQ students achieving an A* and 90% achieving High Grades A*-B.
